Diagnostic Imaging Accreditation

New QIP Website

www.qip.com.au

QIP has been working to ensure that as our business grows, we continue to offer you, as a diagnostic imaging service provider, outstanding service to enhance your accreditation experience. As part of that service we are excited to announce the launch of a new dedicated QIP website www.qip.com.au.

The website has been separated from the AGPAL website and has dedicated Diagnostic Imaging, Retirement Villiage and Physiotherapy sections.

Changes

- Improved and simplified navigation around site
- Easy member login tab available on all pages
- Easy diagnostic imaging member login tab to QbAY and AccreditationPro available on all pages
- Updated QbAY resources including diagnostic imaging accreditation templates, and
- New home page banners to share the latest diagnostic imaging news and events with you.

Accessing AccreditationPro and QbAY

AccreditationPro and QbAY can be accessed from the top left corner 'login' tab on any page of the website, as seen below in figure 1. Unregistered service providers may apply for accreditation using the 'apply' tab below the 'login' tab.

Home page and information

Information and text throughout the website about diagnostic imaging accreditation, FAQs, news and resources have been revised and will be updated regularly to keep you informed. QIP news, conferences and other useful information will be displayed on the home page banners - check out the home page banners regularly before you login or access the diagnostic imaging section for the latest QIP news.

Accessing Diagnostic Imaging

The home page has been divided into icons symbolising different markets so you can easily select diagnostic imaging, see figure 1.

Diagnostic Imaging top menu

The top menu listed below in figure 2 illustrates the inner diagnostic imaging page. Each section of the top menu has more specific information and detailed menus on these topics. See Figure 3 below for an example of the 'Accreditation' section of the website.
